Saturday Morning, May 13, 1865.

The Coxcomb Punished.

In the year 1808 the peace of Tilsit terminated the conquest of Napoleon in Germany, and gave the people in those countries a short respite. Prussia, thoroughly exhausted by he tremendous efforts she made to carry on he war with France, was compelled to reduce her army to a peace footing.

Several officers of that power having obtained an unlimited leave of absence, met very often at Hamburg, to enjoy in common the various pleasures of military idleness.

One day in September, six of them having dined together, and made more than one libation to Bacchus, they at the approach of night repaired to the Café de la Bourse, one of the most noted in the city, and made their entry in the most noisy manner. The Baron N——, a lieutenant, twenty-three years of age—the youngest of that joyous band—rich, handsome and of noble carriage, but foppish, self-conceited and insolent, having noticed an individual of small stature, dressed in black, sitting at a table alone, holding in one hand a newspaper, and in the other a long pipe, who had paid no attention to them on their arrival, and being offended, no doubt, by the indifference, perhaps on contempt, which he exhibited, approached him with the intention of avenging the fancied insult. To that end he laid his hand in a familiar manner on his shoulder, swinging himself back and forth, and said to him, with an ironic smile:

'Ah, good evening, my little school-master.'

The man in black raised his eyes and fixed them for two or three seconds on his interlocutor, then looking again on his paper, continued to read.

'God bless me! he don't answer. Ah, my droll fellow, won't you answer me? I see—that pipe is the cause. Come, come—I must, however, hear your voice.'

In a second, with a flip of his finger, the pipe flew to pieces, the lieutenant laughing loudly at the same time.

Without putting down the paper, or showing any symptoms of being affected by the insult, he turned toward the counter and said:

'Waiter, another pipe.'

The pipe was lit and the reading resumed.

'Ah, so! What country are you from? In what village do you exercise your talents?'

Here the interrogated raised again his eyes and looked at him as he whiffed two or three mouthfuls of smoke, and, lowering his eyes slowly he seemed rather willing to give all his attention to his paper.

'I believe you are some kind of savant. You appear to learn by heart all the news so as to inform all your friends and neighbors. But you smoke like a Dutchman. That confounded pipe causes you too much abstraction.'

And, as before, the pipe was again rudely broken.

Without making any movement, without showing the least sign of emotion, the so-called schoolmaster merely repeated his first order.

'Waiter, another pipe.'

'What a fine voice. Little man, you have the patience of an angel, or the devil. I would give much to see you mad; it would amuse us deliciously. There——'

An old major, with a fine German physiognomy, which showed much frankness, true courage and loyality, and who came in with him, came up to him and said, in a low voice, but loud enough to be heard by those near him:

'You comfort yourself like a man without brains. I tell you this game begins to tire me, and the foolish hilarity of our comrade adds to my impatience, and hardly covers the murmurs of indignation your conduct has provoked in the minds of those present. Quit, quit, I tell you it is now time.'

After saying this, he turned his back to him and retired into an adjacent hall, whither he was followed by his companions, who, by their thoughtless shouts of laughter, covered his reproaches. Seated around the gaming table, they began to play. The young lieutenant, judging by the noise produced by his folly, had forgotten the insult, played deeply, and was winning largely. But an hour had hardly elapsed, when a man in black entered the hall, (of play,) and, approaching him, tapped him on the shoulder, demanding a private interview. The young lieutenant, looking at him over his shoulder laughed in his face.

'Monsieur officer,' said the man in black, 'I am not a schoolmaster, as you were pleased to call me. I have the honor of being a captain in the navy of his Britannic Majesty.—You have insulted me. I demand of you full satisfaction. It is due to me, and I hope you will not refuse it. If you do, I know well the means to obtain it. To-morrow at seven, I will await you here. Arm yourself with pistols.'

Our braggart, who, during this disclosure, had risen to his feet, and had alternately become red and pale, gave no response, but bowed acquiescence, in the fear, no doubt, that his voice would betray his complete terror. The captain saluted the rest of the company and immediately left.

With him went all the gaiety of the lieutenant. He became thoughtful and taciturn—his spirit was no more with the play—he lost all he had before won.

The thought of to-morrow—that terrible to-morrow—frightened him. How much his adversary would have the advantage over him!

Suffering, with so much calmness a series of affronts! Proposing a duel with that firmness, that assurance, that imperturbable sang-froid! Bravery and skill are surely his.—Such were the ideas that crowded into the young man's brain.

On leaving the hall they separated with the promise to meet at the hour indicated. At seven they met; the Englishman was already at the rendezvous, clad in the costume of a superior officer of the navy of his country, covered with many decorations, and followed by a valet, richly dressed, who carried a small casket under his arm. He offered them refreshments, which were accepted; spoke with courtesy, and proved himself to be high-minded and acquainted with the world.

At eight o'clock he broke up the sitting, and requested the Prussian officer to be so kind as to designate the place where the quarrel could be settled, adding that he was a stranger in the place, and he would willingly give the choice.

They then retired to a pasturage that lay between Hamburg and Altona.

Arrived there he asked—

'What distance will suit you?'

'Twenty-five paces.'

'That's too much, monsieur. You could not hit me at that distance. Let us say fifteen.'

It was agreed to. Meanwhile the major observed to the captain that he had no second.

'It is unnecessary,' replied the captain, 'If I fall, my valet knows what to do.'

The major insisted, showed him that it was contrary to the usages of the country; according to that formality the duel could not take place, but he offered with politeness to allow it to proceed, which offer was accepted.

The ground was measured, they took their places. The captain, addressing his adversary, made this singular question.

'Have you good pistols? because I have two pair that never miss their mark! I will give you proof.'

Calling to his valet, he opened the box and took out one of the pistols which it contained, and told him to throw up something in the air. The valet searched his pockets, but could find nothing save his handkerchief.

'That's too large; find something else.'

He then took a dried prune and showed it to him.

'That will do. Throw.'

The fruit was thrown up, and was instantly shattered to atoms.

At this proof of skill, the astonishment of the spectators was at its height; as to the lieutenant, he was more dead that alive.

The captain then took the place assigned him, inviting the lieutenant to fire at him.

The major then stepped in between the combatants, and opposed the lieutenant firing first, saying:

'The usage of the country gives the offended the first shot; and for the second, chance will decide.'

'Ah, my dear major,' replied the captain, 'if I complied with your advice, monsieur would not have the pleasure of using his pistol on a man. Therefore, let come what may, nevertheless, I will that these gentlemen who enjoyed themselves at my expense yesterday, and instead of hindering their comrade of being guilty of such folly, only laughed at my distress, shall, one after another, gaze into the interior of my pistol.'

'Monsieur, aim accurate! Woe unto you if you miss me! For I will not miss you; you will cease to exist.'

They insisted no longer. The lieutenant aimed, and the captain cried:

'It is too high!'

The explosion was heard—the bullet had grazed his head.

'My turn now, young extravagant! Yesterday I was, for an hour, the plaything of your raileries—your sarcasms. Without motive you insisted me, mocked and cursed me with humiliation. I was a schoolmaster, a droll fellow—to-day a man! And who are you? A wretch, a miserable poltroon, trembling with fear! Death, which in an instant you will receive at my hands, encircles you with her shadows; already her icy hand is stretched over you. Your lips are blanched with fear, your eyes are troubled, your face as pale as the sheet which will soon enshroud you.—Your limbs refuse to support you. Insolence and cowardice always go hand and hand; this is all we can expect of one of your stamp.—But before sending you to the other world, tell me—have you made all disposition for leaving this? Have you not a parting souvenir to give to a father, mother, sister, brother, or one who is dear to you? I have here a writing desk, and I will accord to you the few moments necessary for that purpose.

A 'thank you, sir,' very humbly uttered, and hardly intelligible, was all that could be heard.

'In that case,' said the captain, 'if all reconciliation between us here below is impossible, and that your blood alone can wash out the affront I have received—implore, at least, by a short and fervent prayer, the clemency of the Almighty.'

Then the lieutenant, taking his hat off, cast a look at the mute and terrified witnesses of the scene, who all with one accord spontaneously uncovered their heads. During a moment there reigned in that group a solemn and religious silence, which was not broken save by the respiration of those assembled.—At length, taking up his pistol, and pointing with resolution toward his opponent, he made him suffer the most intense agony. But all at once, as if by effect of sudden reflection, he turned to his servant and gave him the pistol, saying, with the gesture, accent and smile of hatred:

The next day the Baron de V——disappeared from the country, and his regiment never saw him more.

THE INDEPENDENT

CLAIRVOYANT!

Eclectic Physician,

From 618 Broadway, New York, has returned to Portland, and can be consulted at her office, No. 11 Clapp's Block.

One of the Greatest Cures on Record.

Prompted by no other than the feeling of benevolence, and for the benefit of the afflicted, I desire to make known a short description of my disease and the unexpected cure which I obtained from Mrs. Manchester's Medicine. Upwards of two years since I was taken sick, which gradually increased until I was so far reduced that I never expected to be well again. I had the attendance of six eminent physicians, and never received the slightest benefit until I commenced using Mrs. Manchester's Medicines. My disease at that time was as follows:—I was extremely feble—confined to my bed. My flesh had all disappeared, the whites of my eyes were yellow, also the skin yellow; I had a dull heavy pain in the right side, and it was very much enlarged: pain in my shoulders and spine. The left side seemed to decay so that there was quite a hollow place in it. I had a very distressing pain at the pit of my stomach; tongue coated thick, stomach very acid, appetite entirely gone, not being able to keep anything on my stomach, fever, night sweats, thirst violent, dry cough, difficulty of breathing, dull headache. I cannot describe as I wish to do my miserable situation and suffering as every organ in my body was diseased. My physicians said I was fast hastening to the consumption.

I enjoy at this time perfect health, and this is a plain, short history of my case, and is the truth. I would recommend every and all invalids to go and consult Mrs. Manchester. MARY A. MOULTON,

Singular Doctrines.

In the Advertiser of Tuesday was an article on Treason, evidently from the pen of the leading mind which controls that journal, bearing the marks of a good deal of thought and elaboration, but containing doctrines so novel and singular that a few extracts may not be uninteresting. Here are a couple:

Has any member of the Cabinet, the law officer of the Government, or any other high official, committed himself to the accusation, or to the opinion, that Jefferson Davis, or any other man connected with the Southern Confederacy, is amenable to law for the crime of treason? Certainly not.

The high officers of the Government know, and all well read legal and judicial minds must know, that neither Jefferson Davis, nor any Confederate actor in office with him, is at all, or under any pretext of law whatsoever, amenable to the civil power on the charge of treason.

"Treason against the United States," says the Constitution, Art. 3, Sec. 3, "shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." * * * "The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason."

Upon what hypothesis the editor of the Advertiser maintains that Davis and his confreres are not traitors, and therefore are not amenable to the civil power on a charge of treason, it would be difficult to imagine but for an incidental word or two in other parts of his article. He does not deign to argue the point, or to show the grounds of his assumption, though he admits that "minds well informed otherwise,"

"In their esteem and honest convictions, all the South who have upheld the Confederacy, and the leaders, most especially beyond cavil, are guilty of legal treason, and can be indicted, arraigned, if captured, and convicted, and ignominiously hung, for treason!"

"A grosser error" than this, says the writer under notice, "never enter[illegible] It is, in fact, passion, not judgment, nor research into the "principles of war and international law—it is "the impulse of an excited, earnest, well "meaning, but over-heated loyalty that animates them—commendable in the motive, "but wholly unsupportable in the theory."

We suppose the writer's argument to be this: that so long as no overt acts are committed, designed to overthrow the Government, there can be no treason, because treason consists in acts rather than words or intentions,—and when such open hostility is once shown the parties become belligerents, and are therefore excluded from the category of traitors. If this be the logic of the writer it has this singular effect;—it renders the crime of treason impossible, and makes of traitors a mere myth, with no real existence. We are inclined to believe, however, that if Government should lay its hand upon Jeff. Davis, he would find much more practical strength and toughness in hemp than in the logic of the Advertiser, and that before such legal hair-splitting and quibbling would arrest the attention of the courts, his body, if not hung on a "sour apple tree," would "lie mouldering in the grave," though it is somewhat doubtful if his soul would "go marching on." Nor do we think our civil tribunals would feel greatly embarrassed by questions of "international law," in dealing with violators of our own domestic law. In settling questions which arise between independent nations international law has binding force,—unless one or the other party feels conscious of sufficient power to set it aside,—but when a sovereign nation comes to deal out justice to its own rebellious citizens, it is difficult to see what bearing in the case can be had by any such extraneous laws.

No extradition treaty, or law extant, of which we have any knowledge, or to which we have seen any reference, authorizes the demand by our government upon any foreign government to which Mr. Davis and his alleged conspirators in the murder of President Lincoln may flee, of a surrender of the fugitives. And why? Because the crime was committed, if at all by them, within territory which for the time was legally foreign territory, or the territory of a belligerent enemy, the acts of whom there, however criminal towards the government on this side of the dividing line, were not amenable to punishment here, on this side of that line.

So far as the conspirators in Canada are concerned, their complicity in the assassination being of Canadian origin, it is very probable that the above extract is correct; but if Davis should flee to Canada, and an attempt should be made to shield him or withhold him from extradition because his offence was committed in the "foreign territory" of Richmond, it would be interesting to see what response would be made by our Government. We think some two hundred thousand "boys in blue" would settle that question, and while doing it settle Canada also; so that we should need no more extradition treaties with her at least for some time to come.

In the chaste column in a last evening's paper, devoted to the editor of the Press, the only words we feel called upon to notice are the following:

"We then cut off the exchange, though Gilman was exchanging his daily for our weekly. * * * True, he got the exchange again, a few months since, (weekly for weekly) by one of his characteristic and contemptibly mean tricks."

This refers to the exchange with the Brunswick Telegraph. By refering to the Telegraph, of the first week in March, 1863, we find the following:

"Two weeks since we convicted the editor of the Portland Press of lying, and now he cuts off his daily exchange. He sends his weekly; but he is welcome to that; we don't want it."

Instead, therefore, of his cutting off our daily exchange with his weekly, we substituted the weekly for the daily sent to his office, and we may say here, what is literally true, that the white paper for our daily at that time was costing double the subscription price of his weekly paper.

In relation to the renewal of the exchange—the "characteristic and contemptibly mean trick" was this: We enclosed two dollars in a letter to Mr. Tenney, and requested him to send the Telegraph to the Press, give credit for the remittance and return a receipt for the same. He returned the money, saying he had entered the Press on his exchange list. Does Mr. Tenney consider it a "mean trick" to pay or offer to pay money for value received?

Mr. Beverly Tucker.

The Toronto Globe hits this somewhat notorious gentleman rather hard. Speaking of his letter in relation to his being connected with the conspiracy to assassinate President Lincoln, the Globe says:

He is at liberty to assert his ignorance to his heart's content; but he might have spared himself the trouble of rushing into gratuitous conjecture about the motives of the Washington Government. His theory that the proclamation has been got up in order to constitute a pretext for trouble with Canada, is a miserably weak invention—too transparent a dodge to serve his purpose. We have no more right to assume that than to believe that Beverly Tucker is guilty of the charge imputed to him. The relations between Canada and the United States are of a most satisfactory kind, as we hope they may ever continue to be; and it is a piece of gratuitous impertinence in Tucker to attempt to stir up public feeling here by unfounded imputations dictated by the dilemna in which he finds himself.

Letter from the Oil Region.

CHERRY RUN, Pa., May 4, 1865.

To the Editor of the Press:

"Petroleum" has become a subject of such universal and absorbing interest, that men read with avidity everything that promises new light or additional information in reference to this wonderful product. But for this fact, I should hardly paesume to act as your correspondent from this region. The territory on which oil has been found in some quantity, even in this State, is now so extensive and the interests involved in the oil business so great, that in this, my first letter, I can touch upon only a few of the more important points.

The intense excitement, and almost insane speculations of last winter, produced their legitimate fruits, and a reaction, which sagacious business men saw was inevitable, has followed. This, together with the sudden decline of gold, sent down prices of oil and oil lands, to an alarming extent, but the panic which ensued, though it nearly prostrated the oil business for a time, was of short duration and served a most valuable purpose. It did more really to establish the business on a secure and permanent basis, than almost anything else could have done, as it put an effectual stop to the wild speculating mania of the day, bringing ruin to many of the most reckless speculators and overthrow to most of the bogus stock companies. Thus an immense amount of property suddenly changed hands, and was bought up at reasonable prices by individuals and companies doing a legitimate business, and these lands are now being rapidly developed, and are adding daily to the wealth of the nation.

Thus, as I remarked, the panic did us a good turn, and in the judgement of the best informed men I have met, the oil business is to-day in better shape, and its prospects more promising than they have been at any previous time. The humbug has been knocked out of it, and it has settled down upon a broad, firm basis, which will soon make it rank second to no branch of business in the country. The price of oil has been steadily advancing since operators began to gain confidence, and now sells readily, I am told, at $7,00 to 7,50 here on this Run. At Oil City it is worth $8,50, and I am told has sold as high as $9,00. It is the opinion of many here, that it will soon command a price higher than it ever reached before. The reasons for this are obvious, when we take into account the fact that more uses for it are being developed every day, and [illegible] in this country and in Europe, has increased a hundred fold in the last eight months.

In coming here from New York, we take the Erie Railroad to Salamanca; thence by the Atlantic and Great Western to Meadville, passing through Corry, from which there is a branch road to Titusville and Shaffer Farm. At Meadville, we take another branch of the A. & G. W. R. R. to Oil City, passing down the left bank f French Creek, or Venango River to Franklin, twenty-seven miles, where the Venango empties into the Alleghany; then up the Alleghany to Oil City seven miles. We "strike oil" first on the Venango River, a short distance above Franklin, though we pass many derricks higher up the river, and even before leaving the Erie Road. In Cataraugus County, N. Y., we find "indications" of "anxious oil-seekers," several derricks having been erected along the line of the road. I had no opportunity of learning anything definite as to the developments in that section. At Corry, Meadville and Franklin, all the freight houses were filled with engines, boilers and other machinery used in boring wells; at Franklin alone, I should judge, there were not less than one hundred and fifty engines, awaiting transportation up the river. Trains heavily loaded with oil meet us at every station, and are seen standing upon every turn-out.

From Franklin to Oil City, both sides of the river are thickly lined with derricks, but there are very few producing wells, though we see abundant evidence that there is oil somewhere higher up, as the whole surface of the river is covered with greenish, bilious looking patches, which we readily perceive is "Petroleum." At Oil City we strike the mouth of Oil Creek, and here for the first time we find oil in any large quantity.

Oil City is a lively, dirty little town of some 3000 inhabitants, and as you approach it by the river it presents a striking and singular appearance. The buildings are principally low, not over two stories, and the numerous tall derricks looming above them all through the lower part of the town, look like skeleton towers to every house. There are many good producing wells in this part of the town, and oil barrels and tanks are thick as flies. The better residences are all the other side of the creek, on what is called "Cottage Hill," a very pretty place. Four years ago this hill was a "howling wilderness."

From Oil City we follow up Oil Creek, where derricks and wells grow thicker and thicker at every step. There is a line of stages running to Rouseville, three miles, but the roads are in such horrible condition, that if a man has any regard for the safety of his neck, he will not trust himself to ride over them. The only other means of getting up is to walk or take a flat boat. Hundreds of these may be seen on the creek, floating down heavily loaded with oil, or going up with empty barrels and other freight, drawn by horses wading in the middle of the stream. We chose to walk, as affording better opportunities for observation, and an examination of the various wells. We found no flowing wells on this part of the creek, and but few that were pumping much oil, and yet almost every rod of boring space on the creek and the adjoining hillsides, is occupied by wells, and in one instance some adventurous oil-seeker attempted to build a tower to bore the middle of the stream, but the floods carried away all but his foundation, which still stands as a monument of his folly. At Rouseville we find about the same state of things as at Oil City; the town itself differing from the latter only in size.

The Buchanan Farm, on which many good wells have been struck, is near this village; it is on this farm that Messrs. Bradbury and Manley of Augusta, are operating, with very good success I believe. At Rouseville we strike the mouth of Cherry Run, now the grand center of the oil producing territory of Pennsylvania. We continue on up this Run, which winds its way through a narrow defile flanked on either side by high bluffs for about half a mile, through a forest of derricks and a sea of mud, when we come to a more open space, when the hills recede from the Run, forming a little valley about forty rods wide and perhaps half a mile in length. Here in this little valley and on the adjoining bluffs, and in the ravines which indent the hillsides every few rods, are located all the great flowing wells of Cherry Run. Here are the Reed, Brevoort, Baker, Wade, Granger, Faunce, Union, Yankee, Mountain, and many other flowing wells, producing from 100 to 350 barrels each per day, besides innumerable pumping wells.

On either side of the valley the bluffs rise abruptly to the height of some 100 to 150 feet, then sloping gradually higher, finally break into high hills and lofty mountain peaks.—Standing upon one of them at the head of the valley, and looking down the Run, a view is presented peculiarly striking and picturesque. The great wilderness of derricks, the huge tanks surrounding them, looking in the distance like the shipping in New York harbor; the hundreds of engine houses with their tall smoke stacks; (taking the place of the steam boat;) the long lines of heavy teams continually passing up and down with oil or empty barrels, and the hordes of anxious oil seekers and oil buyers on foot and on horseback, hurrying in every direction, altogether make up a scene the like of which, outside of Pennsylvania, we may challenge the world to produce.

It was supposed a few months ago that the level or flat land on the river was the only place where oil could be found, but more recent experience has exploded this theory, and to-day some of the best wells in this region are quite high up on the bluffs. The "Mountain well" is one of those on the bluff, and has produced as high as 400 barrels per day, which is a striking proof of the value of these highlands.

The ravines previously refered to, have also been bored with great success, and are now thickly studded with derricks. The largest of these lays just back of the "Reed" well, through which runs a little mountain stream, called "Moody Run." The Brevoort's Company have recently struck a very valuable well up this ravine. Above this Brevoort well, the Portland and Cherry Run Company have a well which they are just about finishing, with very encouraging indications. This company also have another well on the side of the Bluff opposite the Reed well. This well I believe is down some 400 feet with fine indications. Still further up Moody Run is a well owned by another Maine company, of which Col. Welch is the principal manager.—The Bradburys of Augusta, and Moses of Bath, are interested in the well. They are down some 350 feet and their show is very promising. There are many other wells boring in the ravine, and the property is regarded amongst the best in this region.

Cherry Run extends some fourteen miles from its mouth, and acting upon the old theory that the oil veins follow the runs, derricks have been erected along its entire length, and many wells put down, but the fact that very little oil has as yet been found above this little valley, and that almost every well bored on the bluffs or in the ravines on either side of the Run, has proved good, has convinced the best informed "oil men" that this theory is wrong, and that the veins run cross-wise, or nearly east and west. This theory seems to be confirmed also by the fact that a line drawn from Walnut Bend on the Alleghany, (the only good oil territory ever found on that river), to to the big oil wells on Oil Creek, runs nearly east and west, and directly through this little valley on Cherry Run.

I have seen many very singular developements in boring and testing wells; and it often happens that old and supposed well-established theories will be overthrown in an hour; in fact, there can be no settled theories at all. Our most learned geologists and wisest savans are as liable to be at fault as the most ignorant practical operator. All are puzzled to explain the wonderful phenomena of oil and water wells, but I am informed that a company has recently been organized called the "Shaft Co.," whose operations, if successful, will reveal more of the hidden mysteries of these depositaries of the oleaginous treasure, than all the geological opinions and theoretical writings that have ever been produced. They propose to sink a shaft seven feet wide and fourteen feet in length, to the bottom of the 3d sand; (probably about 600 feet;) they expect thus to discover the course and extent of the various oil veins, and by following them laterally, wherever found, drain the oil from a large extent of territory. The site selected for this gigantic enterprise is on the Egbert Farm, on Oil Creek, in the vicinity of the Coquet, and other great wells on that creek. It was my intention to give you some facts in regard to Pit Hole and the upper waters of Cherry Run and Oil Creek, but my letter is already far too long, and these and many other matters, including a brief description of the process of boring wells, which may be of interest to many of your readers, must be deferred for future letters.

J. C. K.

The Washington Trials.

A few papers, chiefly those which are either determined to find fault with everything done by the Government, or are chagrined to think they have been foiled in their purpose to fill their columns day after day with sensation reports from Washington, complain of what they call the secrecy of the trial of the conspirators at Washington, and that they are before a military instead of judicial tribunal; and some of them learnedly appeal to the Constitution, as though the members of the Cabinet and Joseph Holt don't know what the provisions of that instrument are.

We have a partial promise of an article upon this subject from a gentleman of eminent legal ability, who differs from the newspapers referred to, and who insists upon the perfect legality and propriety as well as wisdom, of the course adopted by the Government. While awaiting his article we will only say, that the trials are not secret in the sense that secrecy is intended to be excluded by law; in no sense that prejudices the rights of the accused;—for they are present in person and by counsel, and with witnesses, and have all the rights of cross-examination that could be had with open doors. Were the doors open the Government would be obliged to make invidious discrimination in relation to those who should enter, or else those of the best fighting qualities, the roughs, the shoulder-hitters, and the hardest part of the rabble, would monopolize the space. How could such a state of things add to the security of any right of the accused? Then it would surely be not a very wise proceeding to have the evidence, in a wide-spread conspiracy case, daily spread out by reporters in the daily papers, and sent over the land by telegraph, giving timely information to all who might become implicated, and thus afford them ample opportunity to escape before their arrest could be made.

In relation to the military character of the tribunal, we apprehend that will be found to be in perfect accordance with law and usage. The conspirators are not being tried as individuals merely, who have acted solely on their own hook, and from their own volition, and to subserve their own private ends. They are presumed to be the agents or instruments of an ORGANIZED MILITARY POWER hostile to the Government of the U. S., and this fact, and not the official position of the party or parties upon whom the violence was committed, brings the offenders rightfully within the jurisdiction of a military court. But we will not enlarge, or anticipate what may be more clearly and authoritatively set forth by the legal gentleman to whom we have referred.

Mr. Cobden's Successor.

Mr. Potter, a Liberal, has been chosen to succeed Mr. Cobden in the British Parliament. Mr. Potter, in addressing his constituents made the following remarks:

Gentlemen:—I congratulate the men of Rochdale, the people of England, and the friends of human progress all over the world, on the glorious news from the other side of the Atlantic. I congratulate the friends of popular government on the success of the Federal cause. I congratulate the working men and working women of Rochdale and this great district on the prospect ere long of having plenty of cotton, unstained by the blood of the slave. The proudest aristocracy in the world have had to bow down before the offended majesty of a great people. Let this warning not be lost to the proudest aristocracy in Europe, and let them remember that the maintenance of wrong to a great people is as unsafe as it is unjust. [Cheers.] Men of Rochdale, I thank you for the honor you have done me in electing me your representative. But far more I thank you that you have set your seal on the opinions of that great man who was recently taken away from among us.

☞ The Democrat says it is proposed to erect a first class hotel in Bethel, this season, which will cost $10,000 or $12,000.

☞ The disease called spotted fever has again made its appearance in the town of Phillips, Me. It is a singularly fatal disease.

☞ Capt. Charles E. Nash, late of the 16th Me. Reg't, is now in charge of the Hollowell Gazette, and makes of it a racy and interesting paper.

☞ The Bangor Whig learns that the County Commissioners for Penobscot, have completed negotiations for a lot for a new jail, to be erected next year.

☞ An exchange says the "infernal machine" which blew up the Sultana, was a pile of greenbacks given to the boiler inspector for overlooking glaring defects.

☞ The Brunswick Telegraph understands that the Germania Band has been engaged to furnish music for commencement at Bowdoin College in August next.

☞ The steamer saw mill of Ira D. Sturgis, in Augusta, which has been shut down [illegible] the winter [illegible] operations; it gives employment to about 40 men.

☞ A Boston paper says small silver change is again making its appearance, and pennies are beginning to be a drug. It don't pay the hoarders to keep the small coin any longer.

☞ A colored woman in Marietta, Ohio, brought to her minister five dollars. It was the first money she had ever earned. She wanted it to begin a monument to Abraham Lincoln.

☞ It is stated that the pay roll of the Manchester manufactories is now about $120,000 a month, an increase of $12,000 over what it was before the war.

☞ The pay-roll at the Charleston Navy Yard for the month of April gives a total of 4677 mechanics employed, at a cost to the government of $276,554 39.

☞ The firm of Fiske & Hatch of New York, subscribed $5,059,400 to the 7-30 loan. This is the largest individual loan ever known in this country.

☞ The town of Gloucester, Mass., has accepted a legacy of $10,000, the income of which is to be appropriated towards paying a temperance missionary for that town.

☞ Sergeant Joseph Cameron, now on duty at Fort Washington, near Washington, has been in the service since 1806—two years longer than General Scott. His promotion has certainly not been rapid.

☞ Thursday the Massachusetts House of Representatives reconsidered its action upon the bill extending aid to the European and North American Railway, and passed the bill to a third reading.

☞ H. W. and L. Severance, sons of the Hon. Luther Severance, who was once connected with the Kennebec Journal, are now rice planters in the Sandwich Island. Last year they raised 200,000 lbs of rice. Their mother is with them.

☞ The New York Herald says the Mexican emigration excitement increases. Two more offices are to be opened. It is said that in the West 25,000 men are to be raised by Gen. Sherman.

☞ A merchant at San Francisco having the misfortune to lose his wife, invited his clerks to attend her funeral. He afterward charged each of them for the day as lost time, and made them pay for the carriages.

☞ Several costly yachts are upon the stocks in New York, each of which will cost from $50,000 to $60,000. Captain Loper of Philapelphia is having one built in that city which will cost $65,000.

☞ Wendell Phillips said in his New York anniversary speech that the rebels thought we were weak, but Sherman wrote with the point of the sword, in letters forty miles long, on the bosom of South Carolina, that we were strong.

☞ A subscription has been started in Philadelphia for raising a fund to be applied to the purchase of a farm homestead, with an appropriate mansion, near Springfield, Ill., for the family of President Lincoln.

☞ Attorney General Peters has won golden opinions in this city and county, by his skilful management of the late trial in which he has been engaged before the Supreme Court, and by his able plea to the jury.

☞ The Argus is unreasonable in expecting us to keep pummeling it all the time. One effectual pass at a bladder will as completely let the wind out of it as a dozen. One blow on its head was enough to show its hollowness.

☞ The editor of the Farmington Chronicle is the most persistent man we ever knew in urging upon farmers the planting of young apple trees. The truth is, he has a fine nursery and deals in such wares. Well, his advice is good if it is selfish.

☞ The importation of African negroes into Cuba has averaged from 20,000 to 30,000 per annum, and this in spite of the combined efforts of the leading commercial nations, and the claims of innocence on the part of Spain in her own behalf.

☞ Ex-Gov. Aiken affirms that, not till after the Union forces had occupied Charleston, did he see a copy of President Lincoln's first inaugural! A spurious paper was published, pretending to be a copy; but it was in no respect like the original.

☞ A lady's dressing case has been shipped from England for the great fair at Chicago. It is to be presented to the prettiest girl in that city, who is to be designated by ballot, the voters paying one dollar for each vote deposited. The article is valued at $1000 in gold.

☞ Straws show the direction of the wind; so does the ill-concealed approval by the Argus of the cheering for Gen. Lee by federal soldiers, show its leaning towards the rebels. That paper evidently has a very tender regard for the man that starved our boys in the rebel prisons.

☞ The distance traveled by the funeral escort of the President was 2,700 miles. No accident occurred during the entire journey, and it is estimated that 5,000,000 people witnessed the passing of the funeral car and coffin, while 800,000 persons are supposed to have viewed the remains.

☞ A grand review of Sherman and Grant's armies has been proposed, on the old Bull Run battlefield. Grant is reported as opposed to this great "show," and thinks the "boys" have had marching enough, and should be allowed to go home. Where is McClellan? He was said to be "h— on parade!"

☞ One of the most unmanly acts of a legislator is to vote for a measure that he is opposed to, trusting to the Executive to veto it in case of its passage. That was once done by rum democrats in this state when John Hubbard was Governor; it has recently been done in Massachusetts on the Metropolitan Police bill.

☞ Much has been said and written about redressing woman's wrongs. A great many fashionable women should learn to dress before asking to have anything re-dressed. The dear creatures were never intended by the Creator to be clothed in bare skin—at least not since the exclusion from the Garden.

American Sensitiveness to European Opinion.

Among the benefits which are ultimately to grow out of the events of the last four years, may be reckoned the rapid advance in the emancipation of the American mind from the thraldom of European opinion. A few years ago nothing was more manifest in political, social, and literary circles than the exaggerated estimate of the weight and importance of foreign criticism. Our uneasy sensitiveness on this score subjected us to an immense amount of impertinence from those who were puffed by it into an undue sense of their own importance. Every petty litterateur and magazine scribbler who had made a six weeks, scamper through the country, felt himself called upon to write a book; and sensible Americans were not wanting who really cared for comments of these gentry. That the books showed no insight into American institutions and manners, and served to illustrate nothing but the conceit and shallowness of their writers, seemed to make no difference. They carried a sting. By far the greatest portion of this kind of criticism has been the work of Englishmen. Frenchmen and their continental neighbors have written less upon our affairs, but their works have been pervaded by a spirit infinitely more discriminating and philosophic. But though English books and comments in America have, with scarcely an exception, been shallow and worthless, it was English good opinion which seemed most valuable to us, and which we were most anxious to conciliate. England was the land of our ancestors, the home to which we still looked back with affectionate pride in all that was noblest in her traditions and achievements. The sentiment so misunderstood was but the natural and graceful respect of the younger for the elder, the desire of the child for parental approval. Our trans-Atlantic relations enjoyed the flattery of this deference, but they forgot that the only way to retain it was to manifest some degree of the superior wisdom they had credit for. Their entire failure to do so has proved a fatal blow to their prestige.

Not all at once has this respect for English opinion been destroyed. A succession of shocks were needed to unseat a sentiment so firmly established. When in our hour of trial we were sneeringly told that the "bubble of republicanism had burst," we felt keenly the prejudice and the injustice of such a declaration. Now that it has been demonstrated that republicanism is no bubble but a bomb-proof, we are in a situation to appreciate the worthlessness of that judgment. And so in every case, throughout the struggle now ending. Not an event has been understood in its causes or its bearings, not a prediction for the future has had even an approach to fulfilment. The ruin which has been so constantly foretold for us, has not overtaken us; the temper we were expected to show, we have not shown; that which we were declared incapable of, we have accomplished; and the enormities we were said to be about to commit we have avoided altogether. For a long time we trusted that despite this almost universal voice of the powerful governing and commercial classes, the sentiment of the great body of the English people would be found intelligently in accordance with truth and right. These men, we said, have their own selfish interests to serve. They are special pleaders, and we must not expect fairness from them. But the English people have a genuine sympathy with freedom and justice, their judgment will be true. Alas, for our confidence! The result showed that the English people were profoundly ignorant of the merits of the case, and nearly indifferent to the event except as it promised to affect themselves! Here and there, it is true, were some honorable exceptions, but they were mainly among the more cultivated minds of the liberal statesmen and philosophers, men whose sympathies are with the cause of freedom and progress the world over. They did not represent the average English mind, but something far higher. This is the unvarnished truth of the matter, and if it was at first a source of some mortification that the question of our national life or death, a question in which were bound up such mighty interests for all humanity, should be matter of indifference to the "foremost nation of the earth," we have reconciled ourselves to the fact, perceiving its true cause—that the foremost nation could not rise to an intelligent comprehension of the circumstances.

Still it could not be expected that our ancient veneration for English opinion should survive such repeated demonstrations of its worthlessness. Our past deference to so incompetent an authority is a folly we are in a fair way to be fully cured of. When Blackwood's Magazine informs its readers that "the error of England in dealing with the American war has been in taking too much notice of it; if we had treated it from the first as only a vulgar row, it would have been ended long ago,"—and when the Times, commenting on the recent victories, grimly predicts that our troubles are only just begun, we can afford to greet the shallow impertinence of the one and the malignant enmity of the other with the same smile of contemptuous indifference.

Is Health Worth Having?

If it is, protect it. It is a jewel as easily lost as virtue, and in some cases as difficult to recover. Nature, in our climate, and especially at this season, requires to be occasionally reinforced. But everything depends upon the Tonic used for this purpose. The medicinal tinctures, all of which are based on a common alcohol, are dangerous. Quinine, as everybody finds out who takes much of it, is a slow poison. One safe protective from all unhealthy atmospheric influences exist, and only one. This powerful preventative is HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, a compound of the purest stimulant ever manufactured, with the most effective tonics, alteratives, regulators, and depurators that chemistry has yet extracted from the botanical kingdom. Convalescent, languid and feeble from recent sickness, will find the Bitters an incomparable restorative, not disagreeable to the taste, and eminently invigorating.—No other stimulants produces the same effect as this Stomachic. It does not excite or flutter the nerves, or occasion any undue arterial action; but at once soothes and strengthens the nervous system and the animal spirits.

The Horse Railroad.

A special meeting of the Board of Mayor and Aldermen was held yesterday afternoon for the purpose of a hearing upon the petition of the Portland Railroad Company for permission to lay a double track from Congress street through Middle street to the Post Office—also a single track from Middle street, through Exchange street to Congress street, upon the same terms and conditions, and subject to the same limitations granted in their original right of way.

Dr. Clark, President of the Railroad Company, and M. G. Palmer, Esq., appeared in support of the petition, and urged reasons why leave should be granted them to lay the tracks prayed for.

Hon. W. W. Thomas and Eben Steele, Esq., appeared for the remonstrants against granting permission to lay a double track through Middle street. The remonstrance was signed by Samuel E. Spring and 98 others.

After the hearing was over the Board by a vote of six yeas, voted that the petitioners have leave to withdraw.

It was the opinion of the Board that if a track was laid from Middle to Congress streets it should be through Lime street and not Exchange street.

Androscoggin Railroad.

A meeting of the 3d class bond holders of the Androscoggin Railroad was held in this city last Thursday and Friday. Hon. Wm. Willis presided, and Joseph Ilsley, Esq., was elected clerk.

A foreclosure of the mortgage having matured, and the road having come into the hands of the 3d bond holders, it was voted to organize by the choice of a Board of Directors. Messrs. J. C. Delano of New Bedford, Henry Payson of Portland, Henry A. Jones of Portland, Daniel Holland of Lewiston, and Reuben Cutler of Farmington, were elected Directors for the current year.

Voted to change the name of the corporation and road from Androscoggin, to Leeds and Farmington Railroad Co.

The meeting then adjourned to Wednesday, July 12th, to meet at Portland.

Supreme Judicial Court.

BARROWS, J., PRESIDING.

FRIDAY.—The entire day was occupied with the trespass case of Cobb vs. Chipman. The evidence in the case is not all in. That for the defense commenced in the afternoon.

Vinton & Dennett. E. & F. Fox.

Municipal Court, May 12.

Two lads named Edward Cushman and William Doherty, were brought up for playing ball in the streets. They were discharged up on payment of the costs.

Another lad named James H. Larkin was brought up for assaulting the driver of one of the horse cars. Upon payment of costs he was discharged.

SINGULAR ATTEEPT AT LARCENY.—Yesterday afternoon Mr. Perry, salesman in the crockery establishment of Mr. Charles E. Jose, heard a noise in one of the rooms up stairs, as of crockery being moved. He crept softly up to a room in which was stored some valuable articles, and discovered a woman in a very indelicate situation, fastening some castors to her body. The modesty of Mr. Perry was so much shocked that he almost fainted; but he had sufficient strength to call police officer Williams, who arrested the woman and took her to the lock-up. She gave her name as Mrs. McGinty, and said she resided in Centre street.

EXTRA BOUNTY.—An application was made yesterday by one of the soldiers recently enlisted on the quota of Portland, but who had not been further than Galloup's Island, for the $50 special bounty, offered by our City Council to citizens of Portland, who might enlist. It did not appear that he was a citizen of Portland, and in fact, he did not claim to be; but he was told that nothing could be done in relation to paying the special bounty until some action was had by the City Council on the matter. No decision has been made not to pay the bounty to any soldier who has not served the full term; neither have there been a number of applications made relative to this matter by soldiers returning from Galloup's Island. It is very evident that in order to claim the $50 special bounty, the soldier must have been a legal citizen of Portland at the time of his enlistment.

THEATRE.—The benefit of Mr. Joseph Proctor last evening brought out a large and fashionable audience. The play, Jack Cade, or the Bondmen of Kent, was admirably performed, Mr. Proctor sustaining to the life the character of Cade. Miss Seymour, in her impersonation of Mariamne, the wife of Cade, was excellent; and the stock actors were well up to their parts. The applause bestowed upon the play was hearty and frequent. At the close of the performance Mr. Proctor was called out, and he tendered his thanks for the generous patronage which had greeted him, not only on this occasion, but on every former occasion when he had the pleasure of appearing before a Portland audience.

The play this evening will be Nick of the Woods, positively for the last time. Mr. Proctor sustaining his great character of the Jibbenainosay.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.—We are requested to state that the committee will be in attendance at the new church in Congress Square this evening to wait upon persons who wish to secure seats.

Persons at a distance, who cannot make it convenient to attend this evening, will be accommodated at the close of the forenoon service to-morrow.

PATENTS.—A patent has been granted Edward M. Long of Westbrook, and Isaiah Gilman of Portland, assignors to themselves, Jos. L. Winslow and E. Hersey, for improvement in lamps.

DIOCESE OF MAINE.—The Clergy are requested to read, before the General Thanksgiving, until Whitsunday, the following Prayer, instead of the Prayer hitherto recommended for the country.

GEORGE BURGESS,
Bishop of the Diocese.

O Almighty God, whose judgments are like the great deep, and yet are always true and righteous altogether, we pray thee to sanctify to this bereaved nation the loss of its late Chief Magistrate, whom wicked hands have traitorously slain. Grant that the example of his courage and constancy, his meekness and charity, his integrity and faithfulness, may be written upon the hearts of his successor and surviving associates in power, and of all this people; that so the work which was given him to do may be continued to its just and happy consummation. And we beseech thee, that all the designs of the enemies of our peace being frustrated by thy mighty power, and the guilt of innocent blood being purged from our land through thy mercy, we may dwell together in thy fear and in all righteousness, through Jesus Christ our Lord. AMEN.

SAD ACCIDENT.—Yesterday forenoon, while a lumber train was being shifted from one track to another, at the Grand Trunk depot, the engine being on the rear of the train, Mr. Joseph Penley of Norway, about 70 years of age, and very deaf,—who, it is supposed, was sitting upon some sleepers near the track,—was caught by one of the cars, thrown upon the track, and five of the cars passed over him, crushing his right arm to a jelly, breaking his left leg in two places, and inflicting other injuries on his face and body. He was taken to the Sailor's Home, and Drs. Tewksbury and Foster were called, and all surgical aid rendered that was possible. Such was the extent of his injuries that it was deemed impossible for him to survive many hours; and he died at half past six o'clock in the afternoon. A Coroner's inquest is to be held.

CLASS DAY.—The literary exercises at Westbrook Seminary yesterday, on the occasion of the celebration of Class Day, were of a high order, both morally and intellectually. The parts bore the impress of talent, patriotism and piety, and were listened to by large audiences, who were much pleased with the exercises. A poem, by Miss Swan, to the memory of President Lincoln was very meritorious, and we have been promised it, with one or two prose compositions, which seem to demand publication. At a meeting of the Trustees, held in the afternoon, a project was adopted for extensive improvements of the Seminary buildings.

FAST DAY.—We have heard it suggested that our City authorities ought to make some preparations for the observance of Fast Day which is near at hand. Other cities and towns have moved in the matter, and many of our citizens think some preparations ought to be made in this city for the observance of the day, by the City Council.

REMOVAL.—It will be seen by reference to our advertising column that Mr. Partington has removed to the stand under Lancaster Hall, lately occupied by Mr. R. L. Robinson.

BEAR.—Edward G. Pennell, No. 386 Congress street, has a large bear, killed in New Hampshire, which he will be ready to cut up on Monday.

A. ROBINSON, No. 51 Exchange street, has for sale some beautiful photographs of President Lincoln reading the Bible to his son Tad. It is just the picture for an album.

Harris Court Martial.

WASHINGTON, May 12.

The Harris Court Martial was resumed today. Judge Crane of Baltimore, is the new Council for the defence. It is said he had examined at Gen. Grant's headquarters the rolls of the 32d Virginia regiment of Lee's army, to which the witnesses Chapman and Reed claimed to belong. Their names were not found on the rolls, nor any evidence that they, really are paroled prisoners. He asked leave to submit the rolls as evidence, which after deliberation the court granted. Gen. Sharpe, the officer of Gen. Grant's army who received the duplicate rolls, brought in the rolls, and on being questioned, stated that the names of Chapman and Reed, do not appear on the rolls of Co. K, 32d Virginia regiment; though this was no evidence that they have not been paroled, as they might have come in afterwards, and been paroled in some other company, regiment and brigade.

The Judge Advocate objected to the reception of the rolls as evidence, but the court decided to admit them. Harris then proceeded to read his defence, stating that he was in no way connected with the land and naval forces of the United States, he had not committed any offence, he had not harbored the prisoners, and it had been proven they did not lodge in the house, which they stated they did.

He says they stated to him they were paroled prisoners, and asked for lodging. He being actuated by a desire to get rid of them, and knowing their poverty, gave each of them one dollar to pay for lodging at a hotel, to which he told them to return.

After a brief deliberation with closed doors, the court forwarded their judgement to the Judge Advocate General, and adjourned sine die.

Their decision will probably be published in general orders next week.

☞ Oliver Cromwell was a staunch Puritan, and could not brook the slightest approach to popery. "What are these?" he once inquired, as he saw a dozen silver statues in the niches of a chapel. "The twelve Apostles," replied the trembling dean. "Take them down," said Cromwell, "and coin them into [illegible] that they may go about doing good."

☞ A few days since a Canadian gentleman who is an ardent annexationist, exclaimed, on receiving the news of the surrender of Lee's army, "Now, then, Canada will be annexed to the United States and share in the glories of the 'regenerated and disenthralled' republic." FINANCIAL.
U. S. 7-30 LOAN.
The sale of the first series of $300,000,000 of the 7-30 Loan was completed on the 31st of March, 1865. The sale of the second series of Three Hundred Millions, payable three years from the 15th day of June, 1865, was begun on the 1st of April. In the short space of THIRTY DAYS, over One Hundred Millions of this series have been sold—leaving this day less than Two Hundred Millions to be disposed of. The interest is payable semi-annually in currency on the 15th of December and 15th of June by Coupons attached to each note, which are readily cashed anywhere. It amounts to

More and More Desirable.
The Rebellion is suppressed, and the Government has already adopted measures to reduce expenditures as rapidly as possible to a peace footing, thus withdrawing from market as borrower and purchaser.
This is the ONLY LOAN IN MARKET now offered by the Government, and constitutes the GREAT LOAN OF THE PEOPLE.
The Seven-Thirty Notes are convertable on their maturity, at the option of the holder into U. S. 5-20 Six Per Cent.
GOLD-BEARING BONDS!
Which are always worth a premium.
Free from Taxation.
The 7-30 notes cannot be taxed by Towns, Cities, Counties or States, and the interest not taxed unless on a surplus of the owner's income exceeding six hundred dollars per year. This fact increases their value from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate levied on other property.
SUBSCRIBE QUICKLY.
Less than $300,000,000 of the Loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the market. This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within two months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other loans. It now seems probable that no considerable amount beyond the present series will be offered to the public.
In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscriptions at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

REMOVAL!
DR. W. N. DEMING,
Medical Electrician
Has removed his office from Clapp's Block to 174 MIDDLE STREET,
Nearly Opposite the United States Hotel, Where
WOULD respectfully announce to the citizens of Portland and vicinity, that he has permanently located in this city. During the two years we have been in this city, we have cured some of the worst forms of disease in persons who have tried other forms of treatment in vain, and during patients in so short a time that the question is often asked, do they stay cured? To answer the question we will say that all this do not stay cured, as will doctor the second time for nothing.
Dr. D. has been a practical electrician for twenty-one years, and is also a regular graduated physician. Electricity is perfectly adapted to chronic diseases in the form of nervous or sick headache; neuralgia in the head, neck, or extremities; consumption, when in the acute stages or where the lungs are not fully involved; acute or chronic rheumatism, scrofula, liver diseases, white swellings, spinal diseases, curvature of the spine, contracted muscles, distorted limbs; palsy or paralysis, St. Vitus' Dance, deafness, stammering or hesitancy of speech, dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation and liver complaint, piles—in one or every one that can be presented: asthma, bronchitis, strictures of the chest, and all forms of female complaints.
By Electricity
The Rheumatic, the gouty, the lame and the lazy leap with joy, and move with the agility and elasticity of youth; the heated brain is cooled; the frost bitten limbs restored, the uncouth deformities removed; faintness converted to vigor, weakness to strength; the blind made to see, the deaf to hear and the palsied form to move upright; the blemishes of youth are obliterated; the accidents of mature life prevented; the calamities of old age obviated, and an active circulation maintained.
LADIES
Who have cold hands and feet; weak stomachs; lame and weak backs; nervous and sick headache; dizziness and swimming in the head, with indigestion and constipation of the bowels; pain in the side and back; leucorrhea, (or whites); falling of the womb with internal cancers, tumors, polypus, and all that long train of diseases will find in Electricity a sure means of cure. For painful menstruation, too profuse menstruation, and all of those long lines of troubles with young ladies, Electricity is a certain specific, and will, in a short time, restore the sufferer to the vigor of health.
TEETH! TEETH! TEETH!
Dr. D. still continues to Extract Teeth by Electricity without Pain. Persons having decay

LINCOLN.

Lincoln has fallen, and the sun
Looks down upon a land of gloom;
The leader of his country sleeps
In yonder cold and silent tomb.

Not amid the roar of battle,
'Mid sabre stroke or cannon's boom,
Did death's angel summon Lincoln
To yonder land of fadeless bloom.

No! unarmed and unsuspecting,
The felon seeks his victim now,
And plants the seal of death upon
Heroic Lincoln's manly brow.

Yet on Columbia's sacred soil,
Beings are found so vile—so low,
That felons find in them a friend,
Freedom and Justice find a foe.

Rest, O Lincoln! thou hast guided
Our ship of state through war's wild night;
She was not safely anchored, though
The peaceful haven was in sight.

That form may crumble in the dust;
That noble heart of thine decay;
But a more glorious fame awaits
Thy name on each advancing day.

Thank God! he lived to see the flag
Of Freedom float from Richmond's dome!
That he saw the king of Treason
Hurled from his proud, defiant throne.

Swearing for a Family.

Rev. R. S. Mclay, for thirteen years a missionary in China, relates the following anecdote:

During one of our examinations of candidates for the baptism of Nguhaiig, I observed that one woman and three or four young people had the same surname. This circumstance led to the following conversation between myself and one of the young men:

"I observe you all have the same surname, are you all members of the same family?" I inquired.

"Yes" one replied, "this is mother, and there are my brothers."

"Where is your father?" I continued.

"He is at home attending to business."

"Does he approve of your embracing Christianity?"

"Yes, he is entirely willing."

"Why does not your father himself become a Christian?"

"He says it would not answer for all the family to embrace Christianity."

"And why," I asked with some curiosity "does he think so?"

"He says that if we all become Christians, our heathen neighbors will take advantage of that circumstance to impose upon us."

"How will they do that?"

"Christians are not allowed to swear or fight, and father says that when our wicked neighbors ascertain that we have embraced Christianity, they will proceed to curse and maltreat us. Hence father says to us: 'You may all become Christians but I must remain a heathen, so as to retaliate on our bad neighbors. You can go to meetings and worship but I must stay at home to do the cursing and fighting for the family.'"

BOOTS AND SHOES

THE CHINESE-JAPAN
Manifesto!

The "Wise Men of the East!" (EAST OF THE KENNEBEC!) are making good the old saying, given a monkey rope enough, and he will soon hang himself." This "band of brothers" have come out in a card in the Boston Daily Advertiser, and, CLAIMING TO OWN THE STATE OF MAINE, are DICTATING TERMS to the capitalists of Boston, New York, and ALL OUTSIDE BARBARIANS." They say, "We, the Undersigned, hereby give notice to all Runners or Solicitors of Orders by Samples, not residents of this State, that we will complain of and prosecute any one for selling or offering for sale any goods, wares or merchandise as above within the limits of this State east of the Kennebec river. We also declare that we will shun all Jobbers and Manufacturers who send Runners into this State, as far as we can."

It has been agitated in State and Wall streets whether this was not another phase of the Rebellion breaking out "East of the Kennebec,"—so like the spirit of the slaveholders of the South does this defiance to the customs and civilization of commerce appear. They "crack the whip" with the good old crack of South Carolina, and the

i. e. the RETAILERS OF MAINE, are (in the imagination of these worthies,)

SUPPOSED TO TREMBLE!

What say you, Retailers of Maine, to this barefaced attempt to cut you off from the privilege of ordering goods in your own places of business by by samples shown you, putting you to the trouble to go to the wholesale dealer, or order "in the dark," without samples, or take the stuff that is thus attempted to be forced onto you by those "East of the Kennebec?" Have you no rights or privileges unless granted you by the "Lords of Creation," who at some time quietly got a law put into the Statutes that they might rule the rest of the inhabitants of the State? Look to it that the next Legislature wipes out this Anti-Republican Statute.

What say you, Hotel Keepers and Livery Stable men of Maine? Will not your business suffer for the benefit of the monopolists? Have you no rights? It is expected that an amendment is to be made to this Statute by those "East of the Kennebec," that a fine will be put upon you if you harbor or put up a Drummer, unless somebody owns the goods he offers who has lived five years in the State of Maine. What say you interested in Railroad Stocks in Maine Will this tend to make any more travel, when nobody out of the State can travel with samples unless with a passport signed "East of the Kennebec?" What say the Agents of the Eastern Express Company, and the Company itself?—Will not this doctrine, if carried out, reduce your business for the benefit of the few "owners" East, &c.? What say the hundreds of travelling agents who are thus thrown out of employment, Maine men born and bred, paying taxes and holding County Licenses to sell, but after all, having no right to sell unless the goods are owned by somebody who has lived FIVE YEARS in the State. Are your rights to be all "gobbled up" by those "East of the Kennebec?" Finally, what say the people? Must you who are busy on your farms and in your workshops be deprived of the low prices and good goods that you will always get where there is competition?—Or do you wish to make a few men virtually "rulers over you," to set the prices and give you the qualities they please, poor or good, the way they can make the most money out of it?

See to it that the representative from your town or district is in favor of "wiping out" this "blue law" put into the statute without your knowledge or consent?

Ladies of Maine! Whatever else may be done in this matter, your retailer will procure for you the fashionable, durable and stylish boots and shoes with

THE C-O-D MAN'S Stamp
AND WARRANT,
UPON THEM,
If You Insist Upon It.

For every pair that proves defective

A NEW PAIR WILL BE GIVEN YOU for the defective ones, unless they have been worn so long that it would be unreasonable to expect a new pair.

The C-O-D Man who will do the same thing by the retailer who does the fair thing by you. See to it that you get not deprived "by the Statute" of getting the boots and shoes you like!
